

Show Colorado You Love Her™

Volunteers for Outdoor Colorado

RED ROCK CANYON TRAIL PROJECT

VOC is excited to announce the addition of another exciting conservation project to our 2004 project season. Volunteers are needed to help the City of Colorado Springs open their newly acquired Red Rock Canyon Open Space! Purchased in December of 2003 for nearly $15 million, this spectacular 787-acre property boasts beautiful red sandstone canyons and monoliths, abundant wildlife, and recreation potential for hikers, bikers and equestrians. Scheduled to open in fall of 2004, the city needs your help to construct new trails that will provide key links between scenic canyons, creating the basis for a 17-mile trail system that will offer much-needed recreational opportunities and protect the open space's valuable natural and cultural resources. Lend your hand to the community of Colorado Springs and help open this scenic wonder to the public!

- WHAT: Red Rock Canyon Trail Project
WHEN: August 28-29, 2004
WHERE: Colorado Springs
WHO: 150 Volunteers! (Minimum age is 10)
WHY: To show Colorado you love her!

This project is a great opportunity for Colorado residents, families, local businesses, corporate teams and civic groups to have a little fun while helping to improve our public lands.

We need your help, sign up now!

No experience necessary! For more information and to volunteer, log onto www.voc.org, or contact VOC at 303-715-1010 (800-925-2220 outside Denver Metro) or voc@voc.org. VOC projects do fill up so sign up early! You can volunteer for one day or both, and food, camping facilities, tools, beverages and entertainment are provided.

Volunteers for Outdoor Colorado is a nonprofit organization whose mission is to motivate and enable all Coloradans to be active stewards of their public lands. Each year, VOC partners with land management agencies throughout the state on projects to help maintain and improve our public lands.